WATER IN BUTTER. $14,000,000 Lost to Dairymen. A. A. BORLAND,

Fourteen million dollars are annually lost to dairy interests in the United States troung the low moisture content of butter. The maximum legal amount is 16 per cent.; the average for the United States is only 11.5 per cent. An additional 3.5 per cent. might be added, making the water content 15 per cent., without exceeding the legal limit and without deterioration in quality of the product. Now, how can the moisture content of butter be controlled? There are many factors influencing moisture content of butter, but the two most important are the churning temperature and the amount of working. Churning temperature is of fundamental importance, During fall and winter, when moisture content of butter is boxes will be sold at auction and the low, temperature of churning should be as high as is consistent with securing a product firm enough for handling. Ex periments conducted under direction of the writer showed an increase of 2 per cent. in water content of butter churned at 70 degrees F. as compared with 50 degrees F. That churned at 50 degrees F. pelier yesterday for medical treatment. averaged 13.8 per cent. moisture; that at 60 degrees F. averaged 14.4 per cent.; that at 65 degrees F. averaged 14.9 per cent.; that at 70 degrees F. averaged 15.7 per cent. Churnings were done with a barrel churn, the kind found on any farm. Churning should stop when butter granules are the size of corn grains. ton, N. Working the Butter. The amount of working has considerable influence on per cent, of moisture in the finished product. When butter is worked in absence of water, moisture content decreases rapidly as amount of working increases, but if butter is worked in presence of water moisture content increases with amount of work-

ng. Consequently if high percentage of water is desired butter should receive minimum amount of working sufficent to distribute salt evenly when no water is present, but maximum amount of working if water is present. Care should be exercised at all times not to overwork butter. Again, if natural moisture content of butter is high, all water should be drained away, butter partially worked, water drained off and the working completed. [Copyright 1913, Morse International Agency, All Rights Reserved.]
